

THE SALT LAKE HERALD

Published Every Day in the Year, By

THE HERALD COMPANY.

MORITZ AND BAMBERGER.

TO DEFEND JACOB MORITZ and discredit Simon Bamberger, the Democratic nominee for the state senate, the Republican organ lauds his candidate and assails Lagoon, the summer resort owned by Mr. Bamberger, in most vicious terms. What profit it hopes to gain by a comparison of Simon Bamberger and Jacob Moritz as citizens and candidates does not appear; certainly no bright politician or genuine friend of Moritz would invite such a comparison.

The Herald need not defend Mr. Bamberger or his resort. The people of this county—indeed, of the whole state—know both the man and his Davis county enterprise so favorably that they need no defense. Mr. Bamberger has long been regarded as one of the most liberal, public-spirited citizens of Salt Lake; as mining man, railroad manager, member of the board of education, active member of his church congregation, contributor to public charities and all-around philanthropist, his record needs no eulogy.

As for his resort: When the Young Republicans announced their meeting last summer at Lagoon, the Tribune commented on it editorially, thus: "It (the meeting at Lagoon) is sure to be a successful meeting; the attractions offered are great and THE SURROUNDINGS ALL THAT COULD BE DESIRED."

The public knows that the "surroundings" at Lagoon did not change after the date of the Young Republicans' meeting, and that the description so beautifully and eloquently given by the Tribune at that time is much more truthful than its campaign attack of yesterday. So much for Mr. Bamberger and his resort.

Now for Jacob Moritz: Here is the Tribune's tribute to that eminent saloonist and proprietor of doggeries:

"Mr. Moritz is one of the most public-spirited and charitable gentlemen in this city; no one sends more coal to the poor than he, and he does it without ostentation; the widow and the fatherless know of these and other welcome aids, and are clothed and warmed by his care. He is a handsome gentleman, and when the Utah volunteers were about to depart for the Spanish war, he proposed and carried out with the help of the zealous and patriotic ladies of the city, a rousing benefit for them at the Salt Lake theatre, a handsome sum of money was raised, and he is well known as liberal in the highest degree to the Grand Army posts here. And yet his good record and excellent works do not save him from calumny and malicious personal assault by a church party organ."

The Herald has no word of criticism for the brewery end of Moritz's career. Making beer is not necessarily the best preparation for making laws, nor does it necessarily disqualify a man for good citizenship. But when a brewer furnishes backing for saloonkeepers who will not obey the law; when he panders to the depraved, the vicious, the most disreputable element of the city for the money there is in it, he is not fit to make laws for the state or vote for the man who is to represent Utah in the United States senate.

Moritz may be a contributor to the needy; he may send coal to the poor; the widow and the fatherless as his apologist says; he is doubtless a generous man with his means. Grant all that; he is yet unfit to be a lawmaker or to represent law-abiding people in any public capacity.

It is urged in extenuation of his candidacy that "when the Utah volunteers were about to depart for the Spanish war, he proposed and carried out with the help of the zealous and patriotic ladies of the city a rousing benefit for them at the Salt Lake theatre which netted them a handsome sum." On May 12, 1898, the Tribune announced this benefit for the volunteers as follows: "A movement is on foot, instituted by patriotic ladies, to provide a fitting testimonial for the Utah volunteers." Neither in this announcement, in the appointment of committees later, nor in any subsequent notice of the testimonial did the Tribune mention the name of Jacob Moritz as connected in any capacity with the benefit for the Utah soldiers.

It took over four years for Moritz's apologist to discover that he was the originator and chief executor of this benefaction; and then it had to go outside the record of its own files to cook up such a claim.

Finally, the question in this case does not hinge on Moritz's philanthropy; it does not involve any summer resort business; it cannot affect Simon Bamberger unfavorably.

The one and only question for the voters to answer is this: Do you want the financial backer of nineteen saloons, such as Moritz supports, to make your laws or elect a United States senator for you? Do you want to vote a ticket headed by Moritz?

And the Herald is quite sure that the answer will be the defeat of Moritz and the machine which nominated him, by an overwhelming vote.

A FROSTY RALLY.

THE MUCH TALKED OF opening rally of the Republicans in Ogden shows with marked plainness the degree of harmony that pervades the party. In the first place it was impossible to drum up a crowd big enough to spare the chairman of the meeting the painful necessity of inviting everybody to come forward so the orators wouldn't be obliged to look over a series of rows of empty seats.

State Senator Allison had been widely advertised in connection with the event. It was announced that he would occupy a seat on the same platform with Senator Kearns, an exhibition which, in itself, was warranted to attract an enormous throng. Then he was whipped three times and the fighting game palled on him.

Allison is a Republican, but he has some remains of his independence left. He refused to be put in the position of endorsing the machine and so, when he could get no definite assurance that Senator Kearns would stay away from the meeting, Allison declined to put in an appearance. As it turned out, Senator Kearns was not on hand, so the whole show flared tremendously.

There is a lot more harmony of the same kind here in Salt Lake county. There are more anti-Kearns-Smoother Republican clubs being organized than the party managers have any idea of or will have until the votes are counted. All the argument that can be brought to bear isn't going to convince these voters that machine dictation is proper for the state of Utah.

As has been well said by one of the anti-machine men, the Republican party in this county and state needs a thorough cleaning out. The only way to do the job thoroughly is to vote the Democratic ticket, thereby insuring good county government, capable men in congress and an able jurist on the supreme bench.

The machine must go.

MR. WARDE'S LECTURE.

MONDAY AFTERNOON in the Salt Lake theatre, beginning at 2:30 o'clock, Mr. Frederick Warde, the eminent tragedian and polished, courteous gentleman and student, will deliver a lecture under the auspices of the Press club of Salt Lake. Those who were fortunate enough to hear Mr. Warde when he lectured in the Theatre last year, need not be told what a treat is in store for them. His subject on that occasion was "The Women of Shakespeare."

This year he will have a broader theme, "Shakespeare and His Plays." It is not beyond the bounds of sober truth to say that Frederick Warde is entitled to a place in the very forefront of modern Shakespearean students. Not only is he well informed to the last degree, but he has the rare faculty of being able to impart his knowledge pleasantly, instructively and entertainingly.

Had Mr. Warde not become one of the greatest actors of his time, he would have been one of the greatest of lecturers. While the Press club feels that it is to be congratulated on securing the services of Mr. Warde, it feels that the Salt Lake public is entitled to congratulations for the opportunity of hearing him lecture. No one can afford to miss it. The prices of admission have been designedly made low in order that as many as possible can hear Mr. Warde.

And in this connection, the Herald cannot refrain from calling attention to the magnificent production of "The Tempest," which Messrs. Warde and James are to give in the Theatre Monday and Tuesday evenings with an extra matinee on Tuesday. Mr. Warde interprets the role of Prospero and Mr. James appears as Antonio. The stage settings are elaborate and the performance is sure to be well worthy of a liberal patronage.

ONE ROAD TO RUIN.

A BRIEF DISPATCH from Butte, published yesterday, announced that Phil Green had been sent to the penitentiary for seven years for highway robbery. Green graduated from the Salt Lake City messenger boys' school of vice and crime. After serving several years as a messenger he became a pugilist. Then he was whipped three or four times and the fighting game palled on him.

He concluded that the world owed him an easy living and in the effort to collect it he and a companion held up a victim and robbed him. Swift apprehension and punishment followed. Now Green faces a stiff term in prison. His career furnishes another illustration of The Herald's contention that the surest way to start a boy on the direct road to perdition is to make a messenger out of him.

The Herald has no desire to make it hard for those who employ messengers to secure them, but it believes some measures should be taken to prevent these boys from being put to certain uses. Now they are sent into every haunt of vice and sin and crime in Salt Lake. Before the first dawn has appeared on their cheeks, they are familiar with evil in all its forms. Their unformed natures unconsciously assimilate the foulest of their surroundings and before their parents or guardians realize it, the boys have become hardened.

The case of Green is not the only one that might be cited and, unfortunately, there will be others unless steps are taken to remedy the system. As the case stands today, parents who have any desire whatever for the moral well-being of their sons will keep them out of the messenger service no matter how great a sacrifice may be involved in the withdrawal.

MR. STODDART.

ALL THE PILED-UP wealth of a world of riches could not give one more pleasure than a delightful old boy has given, and won, here in Salt Lake this week. Past three score and ten, yet young in heart as a lad in his twenties, J. H. Stoddart is still the best beloved, the most affectionately welcomed actor known to Salt Lake theatre-goers.

As Lachlan Campbell, in "The Bonnie Brier Bush," he gives a characterization so fine and true that one forgets the player, the painted scene, the silent crowd about him, to weep with the stern old Scotch shepherd in his grief and rejoice in his joy. Even when hardness of heart embitters him against the world, one knows the tenderness beneath the rough exterior, and forgives Lachlan's cruelty to the daughter he loves.

Art such as that is more than acting; it is the portrayal of the best and most genuine things of life; and that such art endures and thrives is the most hopeful sign that the people have not lost the best standard—the love of what is good and true, wherever found.

Mr. Stoddart could not have more friends unless more could know him; he has reached the limit of fame in a great career, but he will never reach the utmost bounds of admiration and affection in his audiences until the curtain is rung down for the last time.

TROUBLE FOR A PASTOR.

A DENVER PASTOR has been asked to resign because he was guilty of sensational methods of exciting interest in his work. The specific charges were that he invited people to his pulpit to discuss labor questions and that he permitted an open enemy of the church to speak there in order that he himself might combat the former's views—a sort of joint debate, as it were. The pastor is the Rev. Mr. Bruce Brown of the Central Christian church.

Naturally, there will be a wide difference of opinion as to the justice of the action of the church authorities in his case. The labor question is a subject of little real importance. Mr. Brown has ample enough authority for that step. The Bible is full of commendation for the laborer and it is difficult to see how any one could have been offended by a religious recognition of the labor question.

For the other offense, that of allowing a professed enemy of the church to speak from the pulpit, Mr. Brown is justly entitled to censure. It may be said that the Christian religion has nothing to fear from the attacks of its enemies, but those attacks should not be encouraged thus openly. If Mr. Brown wanted to engage in a debate with an agnostic he should have hired a hall for that purpose.

To have such an encounter in a church was as bad a bit of judgment as it could be for a saloonkeeper to open his doors to a Prohibition rally.

Anxious Inquirer—No, the Honorable Jacob Moritz did not command the Utah batteries during the war with Spain, or at any other time. No, he did not suggest to Mrs. Judge that she establish a hospital for miners.

No, he did not give John Q. Packard the idea of building and equipping a suitable public library structure. You must be a reader of the Tribune. We surely know how you could have otherwise acquired so many erroneous ideas.

One of yesterday's dispatches says the governor of Texas ordered out the militia in time to save a negro murderer from being lynched. That is altogether to the credit of the governor and we hope the news will be given the same prominence that a report of a lynching would have received.

Nobody will be surprised if the Tribune announces within the next few days that the Honorable Jacob Moritz, its favorite candidate for the state senate, ordered the anthracite operators to stop the strike.

The only living ex-president is to entertain President Roosevelt if the latter is able to visit Princeton this month. Teddy will surely know all about how to run the government when he goes back home again.

If Chairman Anderson wants to attract crowds to his rallies he'd better hurry up and accept the Democratic challenge for joint debates. The pursuit seems to have become a rout.

There seems to be a great difference of opinion about the various street car lines. Every patron is willing to make affidavit that his particular line is the worst.

After thirty-one years an Alabama negro has been convicted of murder. That makes "the law's delays" in other states look like Empire State Express time.

And still the cobwebs are being spun on the desk of Federal Officeholder George A. Smith, while George A. spins campaign yarns in the outer counties.

A New Jersey man by the name of Ham has just passed away. It is to be hoped that he will not now become a smoked Ham.

The recital at the tabernacle yesterday afternoon filled the expectations of the management and the public, the attendance being large enough to net a tidy sum for the participants and the programme being of high artistic merit. The singing of Mr. Easton, which was, of course, the feature of the programme, brought tremendous applause from the audience, and to the critics it certainly appeared as an argument that it takes a Scot to sing the old Scotch ballads. The numbers by Miss Gates, Mr. McClellan's organ solo, the choir's selection and the singing of the Whitney quartette were all beautiful. To some, the quartette number, "Linden Tree," with Mr. Easton singing the solo, was the gem of the afternoon.

The Stoddart engagement goes on to tremendous business. A second magnificent audience witnessed "The Bonnie Brier Bush" last evening, and the sale for the remaining two performances, this afternoon and evening, has been very large.

"Over the Sea" will be seen at the Grand this afternoon and for the last time tonight.

The advance sale for the engagement of James and Warde in "The Tempest" opened at the Theatre yesterday. A half-hour before the box office opened there was a long line of people standing in front, and at 10 o'clock the patrons in waiting amounted to a crush.

The company met with an enthusiastic reception in Ogden last night. The house had been sold out by 3 in the afternoon, and the reports from there after the performance stated that in its history Ogden has not witnessed so magnificent a scenic spectacle as "The Art of Oratory," as Exemplified in Shakespeare. The pupils of these schools have come to look upon Mr. Warde almost as a father. In several years he has not passed through Ogden without visiting them and delivering one of his brilliant discourses.

The professors declare that the Warde lectures accomplish as much as a whole course of study, the students being so interested in him and his sayings.

There will be an approaching and putting contest open to all players, and a game of mixed foursomes will be played between Mr. Copp and Miss Harkness on the one side and Miss Judge and Mr. Channing on the other. It will be a matched play of eighteen holes. A buffet luncheon will be served from 12:30 till 2:30.

Mrs. W. S. Henderson entertained again yesterday afternoon, the affair being a very enjoyable Kensington. After an hour or so of work with the thimbles an impromptu programme was rendered, Mrs. Pinkerton giving several vocal selections and Mrs. John Reed some enjoyable readings. About twenty-five ladies were present.

Miss Eleanor Dooley will entertain at a luncheon at the Commercial club today in honor of Mrs. Samuel Adams of Denver.
